

Prints Letters of Own Name with Help

Activity: Point out letters wherever you go, especially the letters in your child's name.

Why: Most children learn to recognize names before any other word. As they learn what a name tells people, they will become more and more excited to write and share their name.

Activity: Give your child blank pieces of paper to draw and write on. Praise your child's writing whatever it looks like. Hang it on the wall or fridge for the world to see.

Why: Writing clearly takes time. Praising your child's efforts will build their confidence and get them excited to write more.
